The Third Annual Highland District Peach Festival will be held at Nashville, July 20. A full day of entertainment has been planned. Things will get under way at 8 a. m. when the baby contest will be held at the courthouse. At 8:30 the Soap Box Derby will begin at the hill west of the high school building. Joe Bull is in charge of this event, and the winner will enter the Arkansas Derby in Little Rock. This part of the program is scheduled to last until 9:30, at which time the bicycle races will be held on Main street. Hendricks Pope, Jr., is chairman.

Queen's Contest
At 10 a. m. the Queen's Contest will be held at the high school auditorium. Thirty-nine towns have been asked to send princesses and Queen Elberta III will be selected from this group. The result will be made public at the close of the contest, and the Queen will be crowned during the parade at the large platform in front of the Planter's Bank building. A special float is being built for the Queen and her attendants. Nashville's representative was selected July 11 at the high school.

From 10 a. m. until noon the state and district candidates will be given an opportunity to speak. Plans are being made to take care of the speakers on the Rector lawn.

At noon the Rotary club will be host to visiting celebrities at a luncheon at the Garner hotel. Also a luncheon will be held for visiting band boys and princesses at this time.

The afternoon will be filled with band concerts and an organ recital. From 3 p. m. until 4 p. m. the special visitors for the day will speak on Main street. Colonel T. H. Barton of El Dorado, Harvey Couch of Pine Bluff, and Senator Hattie Caraway have been invited. Also, George Raft, Hollywood movie star, who is vacationing in Hot Springs, has been invited. It is reported also, that members of the Arkansas Supreme Court will be here for the day.

Parade at 4 p. m.

The parade, in which approximately twenty-five local business firms and many out of town concerns have promised to enter floats, will be held from 4 p. m. until 6 p. m. The Queen will be crowned during the parade, and at the end of the parade will follow many decorated bicycles. A prize will be awarded to the best decorated bicycle. Elizabeth Hale is in charge of this contest.

Prizes for the floats will be given to both local and out of town entries. First, second, and third prizes will be awarded both groups.

From 6 p. m. until 7 p. m. the memorial services will be held on Main street for Bert Johnson. Mr. Johnson, who was familiarly known as the "Peach King" of Arkansas, was killed recently in an automobile accident.

At 6:30 a dinner will be held for Queen Elberta III and all the princesses, and from 8 p. m. until 10 p. m. an old fiddlers' contest and hog calling contest will be held. From 10 p. m. until 12 p. m. there will be a street dance, and from 10 p. m. until 2 a. m. the annual Queen's Ball will be held at the American Legion hall.

Nashville has won a festive air for several weeks. Howard Hogue is in charge of decorations. The festival this year is being held after the harvest, and will give more people an opportunity to take part in the events. Eight bands from surrounding towns have been invited.

Space along Main street will be given over to peach growers who wish to display their products. Prizes will be awarded to the best exhibits. It has been practically assured that two major film companies will send cameramen here to take pictures of the festival.

Nashville has long been known as the peach capital of Arkansas. One hundred and eighty-two commercial orchards, in which there are two million peach trees, make up the Highland district. The largest peach orchard in the world is near Nashville.

Texas Governor Is Named U. S. Judge

Roosevelt Follows Out Plan of Appointing "Younger Men"

ALBANY, N. Y.—(AP)—President Roosevelt Tuesday announced a cheering Wichita Falls station crowd Monday that he had appointed Gov. James V. Allred of Texas as a federal district judge.

The unusual ceremony of presenting a new judge with his commission on a train platform was performed in Allred's home town. In appointing Allred, Mr. Roosevelt said he was seeking wherever possible to nominate younger men to positions on the federal bench.

"As I said two weeks ago, the efforts of the people of this country to improve our federal judicial system has succeeded," Mr. Roosevelt said. "Our principal objectives for the improvement of justice are on the way to be fully attained."

Mr. Roosevelt praised Allred's record as attorney general and governor of Texas "for fearlessness, honesty and good administration."

The president said with a smile that he had been accused of "making and breaking" precedents. "Now I am about to create another precedent," he said, adding his announcement about the appointment.

There were two interpretations of Mr. Roosevelt's remark about creating a precedent. One was that the appointment of a federal judge was a precedent. The other was that the appointment of a federal judge was a precedent.

Big Hughes Plane

Round-the-World Fliers Land Safely on Flight From Paris

NEW YORK—(AP)—Albert Lodwick, flight representative here for Howard Hughes, announced at 1:55 p. m. (EST) Tuesday that the aviator and his companions had landed at Omsk, Siberia, at 1 p. m. (EST).

Wheel Damaged
PARIS, France—(AP)—Howard Hughes headed his monoplane toward Moscow early Tuesday on the second leg of a round the world flight after a take-off which apparently inflicted serious damage to the plane's landing gear.

The departure came at 1:24 a. m. (EST) p. m. Hope time, Monday, more than eight hours after the millimeter pilot and his four companions landed to set a new nonstop New York-to-Paris flight mark.

His plane's left wheel apparently was damaged in the take-off. It hit a rut at the end of the runway, but Hughes managed to get the heavily-laden craft in the air, barely missing obstacles at the end of Le Bourget field.

Apprehension arose the Americans might experience difficulty in landing at the Soviet capital some seven hours hence. Hughes immediately was notified of the trouble by radio.

A damaged rudder control and fuselage had held the fliers over in Paris for repairs. Mechanics said the left wheel had been checked thoroughly.

United States Ambassador William C. Bullitt and his daughter, Anne, together with embassy attaches, watched the take-off after banking farewell to each of the five fliers.

Toys No Longer,
Gliders Now Play
Vital Airway Role

Feats in Elmira Soaring Meet Spotlight Year of Progress

AIR IS AN OCEAN
Pilots of Gliders, Unaided by Motor, Must Use Air Currents

By NEA Service
ELMIRA, N. Y.—Soaring gracefully as hawks above the rolling hills, delicately wrought gliders have set new American marks for the sailors of the skies to shoot at next year.

The remarkable progress made by American gliders, both pilots and machines, is shown by their performances at the Ninth Annual Soaring Contest here.

Richard C. Dupont of Wilmington, Del., broke his own American record by reaching 6700 feet.

Lieut. Robert M. Stanley, while he failed to set a new distance record due to the technicality that he just missed beating last year's record by the required 5 per cent, soared 225 miles from Elmira to Washington, D. C.

Peter Diehl, the great German sailplane, duplicated Stanley's distance feat, and rose to a height of 8000 feet, but he is not eligible for the American record.

The fact that motorless gliders, rising from a low 800-foot hill, have become able to rise a mile and a half in the air, or travel hundreds of miles to land at an announced destination, brings soaring sharply into the forefront of aviation news.

Improved ships and increased skill and knowledge on the part of pilots are taking the sailplane out of the top class and making it a real adjunct of aviation.

Falling, But Rising
The art of sailplaning might be called the art of delayed descent. A sailplane is constantly falling, even when it is rising.

If that sounds contradictory, think of it this way. Gravity pulls downward anything launched into the air. A plane is so designed that its wings, by resistance to the air, allow it to descend slowly, or glide downward, just as you see an ordinary airplane do when its motor is shut off.

But the glider is so lightly built and delicately designed, that its "sinking velocity" is very low. That is, it glides downward more slowly than a heavy airplane. The very slightest descent will serve to keep it gliding.

Say that, gliding slowly downward, such a glider meets an air current in which the whole of the surrounding air is rising twice as fast as its own rate of descent. While the glider is theoretically "descending" with regard to the air in immediate contact with the wings, "descending" enough to keep it aloft, the whole air current is rising, so that it is actually gaining altitude with relation to the earth.

The Air Is An Ocean
Winds, when they come to an obstruction like a hill or ridge, must rise to get over it. So, close to the surface of the earth, there are always variations in the wind that are like waves of the sea.

But there are also areas of rising and falling air that are more like the great ocean currents. For instance, above great cities, barren hills, and sand areas, the air is usually warm, and rising. But over bodies of water, or woods, it is more likely to be cool, and falling. The glider pilot knows all the details of such phenomena, just as a sea pilot knows his waves and currents, and he "reads" them and uses them as they come along.

The trick, then, is to ride an ascending air current until your forward progress has brought you out of it and then to find another such rising area before your downward glide has brought you to earth. Given ideal air conditions, there is no theoretical reason why a glider should not stay in the air, or rise, indefinitely.

What happens, of course, is that sooner or later the pilot runs into an area of still or descending air out of which he has not time to run before his constant downward glide has brought him to earth.

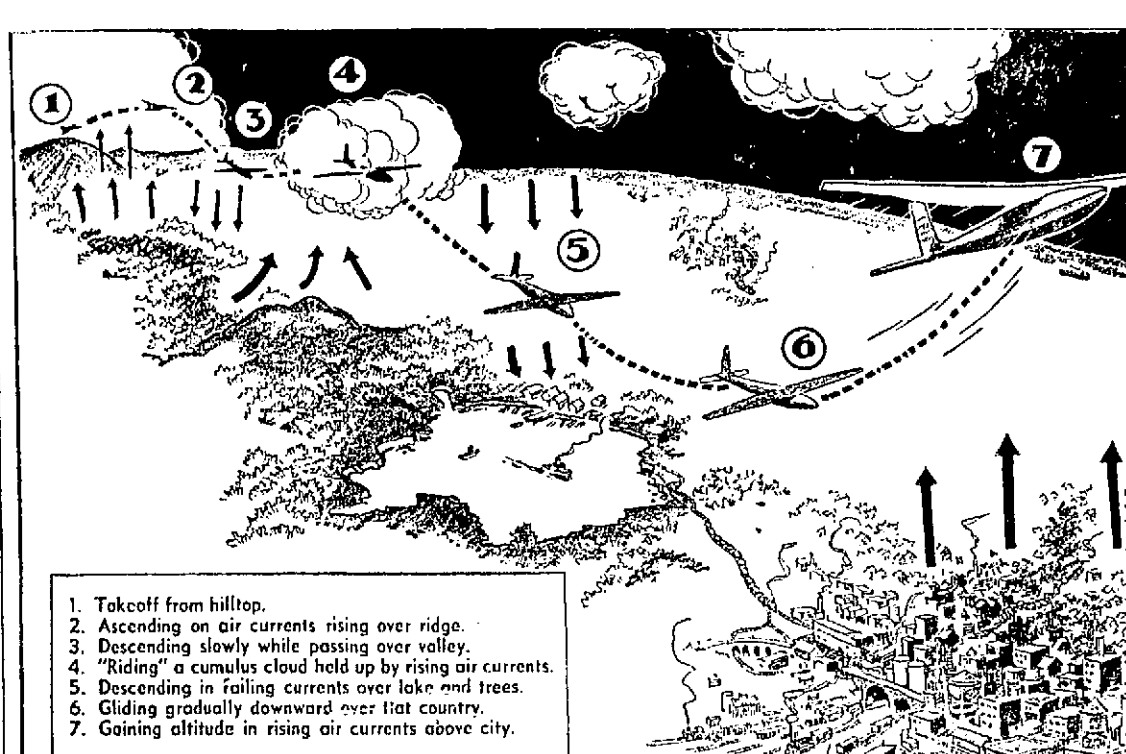

Forty gliders were entered in various competitions in this year's Elmira meet, showing how the art is "taking on" with a constantly increasing number of pilots.

Cemetery Working
There will be a grave-yard working at Forest Hill cemetery Friday, July 13. All persons interested are urged to report.

The deepest salt mine in the world is said to be near Berlin, Germany, and is 4175 feet deep.

A Thought
Men fear death, as if unquestionably the greatest evil, and yet no man knows that it may not be the greatest good.—W. Milford.

Gliders Set New Air Records

1. Takeoff from hilltop.
2. Ascending on air currents rising over ridge.
3. Descending slowly while passing over valley.
4. "Riding" a cumulus cloud held up by rising air currents.
5. Descending in falling currents over lake and trees.
6. Gliding gradually downward over flat country.
7. Gaining altitude in rising air currents above city.

Wallace Funeral Is Set for Wednesday

Body of Hempstead Confederate Soldier Arrives in Hope Tuesday

ARKADELPHIA, Ark.—(AP)—Dr. Walter Scott McNutt, candidate for governor, Tuesday cancelled speaking engagements in northwest Arkansas as the result of the death in St. Louis of his father-in-law, W. P. Wallace of Ozark.

Wallace, Confederate veteran, reputed to have killed the first federal soldier on Arkansas soil during the war between the states, died of illness developing during his return from the Gettysburg reunion.

Body Arrives Here
The body of W. P. Wallace, 94-year-old Confederate war veteran who died in a government hospital at St. Louis early Monday, arrived in Hope aboard a Missouri Pacific passenger train at 11:55 a. m. Tuesday.

Accompanying the body home was a son, Cecil, who attended the reunion in Gettysburg with his father.

Funeral services will be held at 2:30 p. m. Wednesday from St. Paul church near Ozark with burial in St. Paul cemetery. The officiating minister had been announced at noon Tuesday.

Democrats Again Back Sen. Van Nuys Despite Court Position

INDIANAPOLIS—(AP)—Indiana Democrats gathered here Monday night for a convention at which, politicians predicted, the renomination of Senator Frederick Van Nuys, opponent of President Roosevelt's court bill and other New Deal measures, would be only a formality.

The convention Tuesday is expected to offer Paul V. McNutt, whose White House aspirations figured in the movement which brought Van Nuys back into the party fold and halted his threat to seek re-election as an independent, as Indiana's choice for the 1940 presidential nomination.

Word from the platform advisory committee said that one of the major planks would be an endorsement of McNutt, former governor and now United States high commissioner to the Philippines, for president.

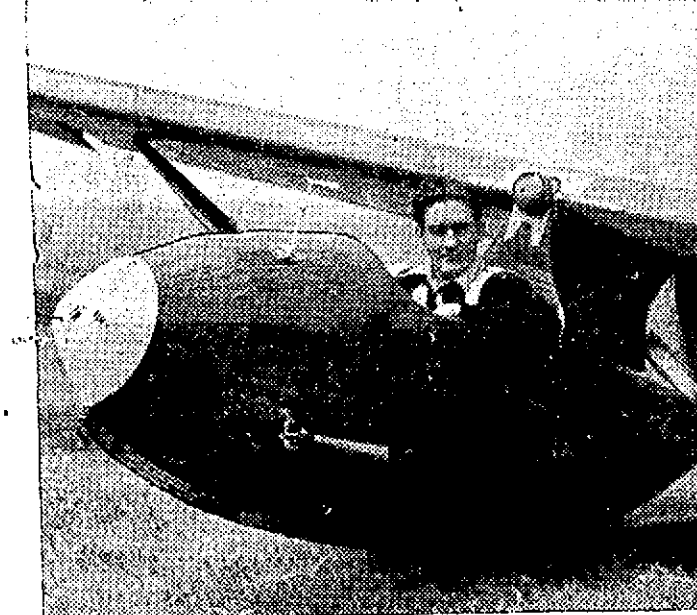

Convention-eve reports said McNutt's name would be the only one mentioned in the platform, that a general resolution would commend the state and national administrations without naming names. Such a plank would meet the demand of Senator Van Nuys that there be no criticism of his opposition to New Deal measures, notably the court and government reorganization bills.

Urged in Speech by Farm Bureau Head

Senator Caraway Makes Surprise Visit to This City

3,000 VISITORS HERE
H. H. Huskey Presides
Over State Farm Meeting Tuesday

Approximately 3,000 farm leaders and visitors from all parts of Arkansas gathered at the Fruit & Truck Branch Experiment Station Tuesday where they heard an address by Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation.

Senator Hattie Caraway, not listed on the official program, made a surprise visit to Hope Tuesday and also attended the farm bureau rally at the station farm where H. H. Huskey, president of the local farm bureau, presided over the meeting.

Mr. O'Neal, Senator Caraway, and other state officials of the Arkansas Farm Bureau Federation, were guests Tuesday noon at a joint luncheon meeting of the Hope Kiwanis and Rotary clubs at Hotel Barlow.

O'Neal's Speech
Declaring that the farmers of America now have a program that offers bigger possibilities than anything previously developed to control surpluses so that prices may be stabilized, and that, with necessary amendment, it can and will be made to work, Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, said at the outset of his speech.

The occasion was the big statewide farm bureau rally honoring Hempstead county for having the largest county farm bureau membership in the state, this county unit having more than 1,500 members on its rolls, with more joining daily.

Fears Price-Fixing
President O'Neal pointed out that it is certain that if the farmers let the present agricultural program fail, bills providing for price-fixing by the government will be introduced and strongly supported by many members of congress.

"I can't believe that farmers want that sort of thing. It would mean regimentation with a vengeance. The present program gives us the opportunity to keep order in our own house through voluntary co-operation, and we can stabilize prices through co-operation."

President O'Neal asserted that "the present program puts a floor under and ceiling over our prices, and we are willing that other groups should have the same thing, so long as they are based on the parity principle. The program is not perfect, but if the farmers will use it, it will be the best program we have ever had."

He urged farmers to stand behind the principle of the present bill. He added that he had been over great areas of this country in the past few weeks, and from what he had seen and heard was confident that the farmers are co-operating.

To Ask Amendments
"We will go back to congress next year to ask for some necessary amendments, and in the end we will have the farmers of this country united behind one big national farm program."

"We will carry on the battle against monopoly prices in industry and labor, and eventually, if farmers will only back up their farm organization, we will win many battles that they cannot win because our organized strength still leaves something to be desired."

"It is up to you people here, and to people like you everywhere, to organize in the land, to help build the organization to the strength necessary to achieve our final goal, which is the attainment of fair economic and social conditions for farmers."

"It is necessary for the welfare of the nation that this be accomplished, because a mass-production industrial economy can be maintained only when stabilized buying power is maintained for the great masses of the people."

"Only through increased production and use of goods can the national wealth be increased. A stabilized agriculture is the master key to the situation, because the farmers are the biggest buying group in the country, and since farm income and factory payrolls rise and fall together."

Urges Farmers Unity
C. C. Randall, assistant director of the Extension Service, College of Agriculture, said:

"The remainder of the Italian troops would be incorporated into the Spanish Foreign Legion as volunteers with their officers." The one charged, thus trying to escape removal by the international committee's representatives.

The Italian-British friendship treaty provided that the main part of the agreement would become effective only after some "settlement" of the Spanish war, followed by withdrawal of Italian forces from Spain.

Six of Wan an 'Arf A Dozen of t'Other

AS a relief from the weighty news of the day you might give a moment or two of thought to the matter of the famous—and puzzling—British accent.

Hollywood has been doing its best to instill a true British accent into the vocabularies of its stars; so have the radio people; and the result, in most cases, has been something fearful and wonderful to hear. And the British, in their turn, have long insisted that American-made films are unfit for empire consumption because of the dreadful American accent which pervades them.

But now it develops that the British themselves are not quite sure what is and is not good, sound English speech.

Milton Bronner, European manager for the Newspaper Enterprise Association, points out that while England is in area slightly smaller than the state of Alabama, its 40,000,000 people have more accents and dialects than the entire continental United States.

YORKSHIREMAN and Lancashireman can understand one another, with an effort; but neither has a speech like that of the native Somerset. The London Cockney is in a class by himself. And the celebrated Oxford accent deserves a separate volume.

The upper class in London calls a bath a bawth and grass, grahss; but the upper class in Liverpool or Edinburgh will pronounce those words precisely as Americans do.

AN observant London clergyman recently remarked that the upper class West End. He cited, as an example, the line frequently sung in church. "Praise Him for His grace and favor."

In the Cockney East End, he said, this line becomes: "Prize Him for His grice and fiver."
And in the cultured West End the line sounds like this: "Preeze Him for His grease and fever."

All of which, doubtless, adds up to nothing at all. But a harassed American who has to listen to imitation British accents every time he goes to a movie or turns on the radio may properly draw a modicum of comfort from it. He can go on comfortably saying "Noo Yorkk" instead of "Nyeu Yohk," secure in the knowledge that at least half of England itself would probably agree with him.

Drugs on the Market

THERE shouldn't be many howls from any quarter, Republican, Democratic, liberal, or conservative, over one piece of "social legislation" recently made law by the presidential signature.

Referred to is the new food, drug, and cosmetics act. If a government is an instrument for the protection of a people against its own folly, this act is a little government of its own—a protection of a people against its own folly, gullibility, excessive trust, and incontinence, and against the unscrupulous men who turn those failings to their own profit.

The country has had federal food and drug regulation, of course, for years, but it has long been obvious that the law had to do its biting with its gums. Thanks to the efforts of many citizens' groups, some teeth have been provided.

Important provisions of the new law are its prohibition of the distribution of drugs or cosmetics which may be injurious to the health; its bans on false advertising and misbranding; and its requirements that all new drugs be tested for their effects prior to distribution and that all habit-forming drugs be labeled as such.

This is genuine social legislation.

Infantile Paralysis Has Apparently Spread in Recent Years

(This is the second of a series of six articles by Dr. Fishbein on infantile paralysis.)

Apparently infantile paralysis spreads from one person who has the disease to another by the secretions that come from the nose and throat. This disease occurs chiefly in the northern half of the world during the summer months, but particularly during August and September. Apparently there have been more cases recently than in the past, with epidemics in 1930, 1931, 1933, 1935 and 1936 in various parts of the United States.

No class of people is exempt. The social and the sanitary conditions do not seem to influence in any way the incidence or spread of this disease. Most of the cases occurred formerly in country areas, but the most recent epidemics have occurred in cities.

The majority of cases seem to affect children below five years of age, but people as old as 60 and 70 have been attacked. In more recent epidemics older children and adults have suffered increasingly.

Just why some children are attacked by the disease and others fail to become infected is also not known with certainty. It has been argued that the constitution of the child may be important, that its diet may be important, but none of these factors have been definitely established.

It is established, however, that in the majority of cases the infectious agent enters the body by way of the nose, although it is also established that it is possible for the infectious agent to enter the body through the bowel or even through the skin.

Presumably the condition is not often transferred by milk or by the water supply, or by swimming pools and beaches, yet it is conceivable that it can be transmitted in this way. It has also been argued that the disease may be spread by flies, insects, and dust, but this method of spread has not been definitely incriminated in any epidemic.

We know that when a child is born it may have from its parents a certain amount of resistance to this disease, and for that reason very small infants are not frequently infected. However, this resistance may disappear early in life. In other cases it may persist for longer periods.

Moreover, there seems to be some evidence that people who are quite well may carry the infectious material of infantile paralysis and transmit the disease. It seems possible, too, that mild cases which have the early stage of the disease but which do not become paralyzed are also a significant factor in spreading infantile paralysis. Obviously, it is important to be able to detect cases of this type so as to prevent their circulation if this disease is to be controlled by any such method.

How Are You Coming Along With Your Work These Days?

RAISING A FAMILY

By Olive Roberts Barton

Child Should Obey—Not Resent—Your House Laws.

(No. 140)

We have a black cocker spaniel called "Mister." He is a smart little fellow but very sensitive. Also he has a decided will of his own. There are places he is allowed to lie and places forbidden. Yet, like a child, he will snatch a privilege at times and get on a couch where he knows he has no business being.

Often we blink at cheek, mostly because he looks so funny and guilty. When he tried us out to see what we would say or do, some tender-hearted member was sure to say, "Oh, let him alone. The cock is soiled anyway and he can't hurt it." One thing led to another, until he finally owned the place. Then came the new covers. Nice chintz covers with bright flowers. We had let ourselves in for it. What to do with Mister now?

He was due for some discipline. A few shavings and "get off" did the job. He learned at once.

Now dogs are not children, but it goes to show that when a dog knows we mean business, certainly children, with minds a hundred times keener, can learn it, too.

Speaking of learning to think kindly of house rules, I think I shall go on just a bit more about Mister. By this time, he knows his responsibilities and his limitations. I often study him and try to learn his sweet psychology. He is just impish enough to be a cross between a clown and a bad little boy. Perhaps you have not caught the comparison between an animal and a child. But it is there.

CAST OF CHARACTERS

TRAN DEARBORN—heroine, student nurse. She ran into love and trouble when she met DR. BOB BENCHLEY—hero, handsome young internist. He had trouble, too, keeping up with brilliant DR. STEPHEN SARGENT—head surgeon. Dr. Sargent's problem was something else again.

Yesterday! One day Dr. Benchley suddenly ordered Tran in his arms and, frightened, Tran looks up to see Dr. Sargent standing in the doorway. She flees in terror.

CHAPTER V

ALL the rest of that day, after the terrible Top Sarge had surprised her and Bob Benchley in the instrument room, Tran waited dreadingly for the summons to an interview with Miss Armstrong—that fateful interview during which the director of nursing would tell her, regretfully but firmly, that she was a misfit. . . . A "misfit" was Miss Armstrong's euphemism for a student nurse who failed to click.

Late that afternoon, hurrying along a corridor on an errand to Central Supplies, Tran almost collided with a white-coated figure. Dr. Bob Benchley halted her by the simple expedient of hooking his little finger through hers, and murmured swiftly, "Heard anything from Armstrong?"

"Not yet."

"Maybe you won't," he encouraged her, but his voice lacked conviction. "Top Sarge dressed me down for both of us—unprofessional conduct—interference with nursing discipline—were some of his rhetorical high spots. . . . I'm still licking my wounds. Haven't time to tell you all about it now, but—he glanced warily over his shoulder—"when are you off duty?"

"This evening at eight—but only till ten, of course."

"Meet me at Borden's at eight," he directed swiftly. "We can slip over to the park."

"No," Tran flung over her shoulder as she tore herself away. But she knew she'd have a hard time living up to that "No" when he called softly after her, "You're the sweetest thing God ever made, Agility."

SHE hurried all the more after that, because the errand was for Miss Miller; and the icicle's sense of timing was unanny.

When Tran got back with the tray of sterilized dressings from the Autoclave—the great cylindrical steam sterilizer—Miss Miller, with the assistance of Miss Smart, a third-year student, was working in the service room off the corridor from which the private rooms opened.

Right now, Tran knew, Miss Miller was on private duty. The patient, one of the doctors from Saint Vincent's board of directors, had specially asked for Miss Miller.

For Tran, that alone invested Miss Miller with a halo. But on top of that, the case was one of Dr. Sargent's. . . . That lent Miss Miller wings of glory. Tran forgot her worry in an age of eagerness to please Miss Miller.

When she hurried, a little breathless, into the service room, Miss Miller was saying, "Of all the patients in the world, doctors are the biggest babies. They're always sure they're going to die. He's diagnosed his own case a dozen times in the last six hours."

"I know," Miss Smart said. "Miss French had one last week. Believe it or not, he insisted on taking his own temperature. How do you manage yours?"

"Manage?" Miss Miller's blue eyes held a glint of cool amusement. "I treat him exactly as if he were a bricklayer who wouldn't know a clinical thermometer from a stethoscope. After all, I am the nurse. If—oh, here you are, Dearborn!"

She turned to Tran.

"Let's see what you've brought. Um—six towels. Right. . . . Sheet. Right. . . . Laparotomy gown. Right. . . . But, my dear child, you're positively white about the mouth. How often must—"

"I know, Miss Miller," Tran blurted. "I have no professional poise. But working with you is so—so exciting that I—well, I just forget about everything else."

FOR once, out of complete ineptness, she had said the right thing. Miss Miller's smile was almost friendly.

"Well, I must get back to my patient," she said. "Now I wonder, Dearborn—Miss Smart is assembling the sterile articles for me—I wonder if I can depend on you to get together the unsterile? You'll want—"

"I know," Tran cut in breathlessly. "Collodion. Two tourniquets. Tissue forceps in two percent Lysol. Flask of normal saline. Board. . . . I looked it up when I heard it was to be a transfusion. I hoped you'd let me help."

"Well, well! Our little Utility seems to be running on all six to four. . . . When you finish, you're to go directly to the dormitory," she added, and moved with her erect, lithe walk out of the room.

Tran dropped. She had dreamed of being allowed to watch the transfusion—from a respectful distance, of course. But who was she, to hope for favors with a death sentence hanging over her head? She would have been sure she read pity in Miss Miller's eyes, if she hadn't known that "the icicle" was not to be pitied.

For of course Miss Miller must know.

A Book a Day

By Bruce Catton

Luckypenny's Leg Lends a Hand.

Jim Luckypenny was an underpaid accountant for a British munitions firm. He had a wife, a son, and a daughter. And he had a hollow wooden leg.

It was his artificial leg that lifted him from a humdrum desk to the exciting adventure in love and international intrigue. If the leg hadn't been hollow, Luckypenny wouldn't have tried to smuggle five million lira out of Italy, he wouldn't have met Zenaida, and he wouldn't have looked into the muzzles of the rifles of a Spanish nationalist firing squad. And Bruce Marshall's biting satire, "Luckypenny" (E. P. Dutton & Co.; $2.50), wouldn't have the story it is.

Intensely interesting, vitally human, Marshall's novel moves quickly, carrying its middle-aged, egotistical hero into the inner circle of the Roman Fascist party, where, aided by the love of a charmingly feminine spy (Zenaida), he wins the arms contract for the Ethiopian war. He becomes a director of the munitions company, and the personal danger he undergoes is matched in intensity only by the tangled love affairs of his son and daughter, his employer, and his employer's daughter.

A full-fledged "merchant of death" Luckypenny moves on to his ultimate fate, after discovering his wealth brought only unhappiness and tragedy. He might have escaped, but there was money to be brought from Spain, against customs restrictions, so the hollow leg came in handy again.

Vividly drawn, Marshall's story has the power of making the reader forget time completely until the last page is finished.—T. J. H.

Paul Harrison in Hollywood

The Movie People Keep on Acting Like Movie People.

HOLLYWOOD.—Short takes: A group of executives and the writer of picture assembled the other afternoon to hear recordings of the much-ballyhooed star's songs. The author was asked what he thought of the voice.

"I'd describe it," he said, "as a cultivated serenade."
Wayne Morris and Priscilla Lane have allowed their romance to cool in preparation for new pairings engineered by the publicity department.

Rosamary Lane and Jeffrey Lynn, who have just finished a picture together, have consented to play a heart-throb role for the gossip columns.

Although press agents have engineered scores of widely-noted attachments, a precedent will be set when one of them is made the defendant in a suit for alienation of affections. The husband, an obscure actor, will claim that his wife was estranged by her buildup as an unattached glamor gal, and that she was forbidden to see him.

Myrna Wants to Kiss, Alice Wants to Sing
Myrna Loy has served notice on her bosses that she is tired of perfect wife pictures and wants to be a meme for a change. . . . And Alice Faye, somewhat to her own consternation, will be shifted into straight drama as quickly as possible. She still thinks she's a better singer than an actress. . . . Leo Carrillo hasn't given up the idea of playing, in real life, the role of the governor of California.

A picture, previewed the other night, was so bad that the footprints are said to have walked out of the forecourt of the theater. . . . That film will join the list compiled by Martin Greene in a scheme to increase box office receipts throughout the nation. He plans to show movies in the streets, thus driving people into the theaters. . . . All Hollywood seems pleased by the comeback of Lew Ayres, who stole "Hollywood" at Columbia and was being fought over by Paramount producers when he moved to M-G-M. . . . Truth about William Wyler's removal from the directorship of Gary Cooper and Merle Oberon in "The Lady and the Cowboy" is that he refused to attend a conference with Producer Goldwyn. Summarily ousted, he then wanted to discuss it, but by that time Goldwyn didn't want to talk.

They whistle while they work: Employees of Walt Disney have been given a five-day, 40-hour week, and a two-week vacation with pay. . . . Tyrone Power, Gary Cooper, Harold Lloyd and Director Lloyd Bacon have gone crazy over miniature trains. And Al Johnson is studying plans for a costly toy-gauge railroad system to be installed in his garden. . . . John Mon-

Today's Fashion Hint

Become "Slim" in a Frock Cut on Shirtwaist Lines

By CAROL DAY
Since this charming dress follows basic shirtwaist lines, it has the slim-lined straightness that makes people exclaim, "Haven't you lost weight? You look so slender!"

But it also has the softness and floating quality that you crave on summer afternoons. The full sleeves, bodice gathers and dainty frill all contrive to give it the quality you like. Sleeves like these are always cool and so is the deep V of the neckline.

Make this unusually graceful design, Pattern 8243, in voile, chiffon, handkerchief linen or mull.

It's a fashion you'll wear time and again and never tire of because the styling is so good—simple enough for street wear, appropriate for afternoons too.

The Battle Is Over

The battle is over, a soldier has passed;
How proudly he wore the Gray.
The battle is over, he's among the lost
To pass along the way.

The battle is over, the cannon roars;
He's left the pain and the strife;
A soldier has gone to join once more
His comrades true in life.

The battle is over, there was slow retreat.
When the Southern Cause hung low;
Yet his proud army, noble in defeat
Has and honor in the after glow.

The battle is over, arms are at rest,
And the sound of the air;
As the hymns from out the West
Heretofore immortal song and prayer.

The battle is over, the sun sets clear;
At a newly-made mound,
Through the body will linger here,
His soul is on higher ground.
—Boca Polk Shipley.

The above poem written by Boca Polk Shipley, in fitting to the memory of our Southern heroes, who in war and the dark Reconstruction days fought life's battles so bravely, is dedicated to the passing of Mr. W. P. Wallace of Ozark, who made "the slow retreat" on route home from attending the fifty-fourth reunion of the last reunion of the Blue and the Gray.

Big Hughes Plane

was unshaven and appeared tired, but imperturbable.

Flies His Little Rest

Hughes' only rest in Paris was a couple of hours spent in the apartment of the Le Bourget field commandant. Direction of repairs, refueling and replenishment of supplies kept him busy.

His itinerary mapped a route from Paris across Belgium to Germany passing over Berlin and Cassel, thence over Poland to East Prussia, Lithuania, Latvia and then Soviet Russia.

Meteorological reports indicated the fliers would have good weather at least until they reached the German-Polish frontier.

Beat Lindbergh

Hughes and his companions in the first successful effort to follow the trail blazed by Lindbergh May 20-21, 1927, landed at Le Bourget airport at 4:55 p. m. (10:55 a. m. E. S. T.), 16 hours and 35 minutes after their take-off from Floyd Bennett airport.

Lindbergh spanned the distance, estimated at 3,600 miles, in 33½ hours.

Hughes' flight was greeted here as a remarkable scientific achievement showing the progress made in aviation since Lindbergh's solo journey.

The pilot hoped to continue on to Moscow within two hours after landing, but at the last minute it was found the bottom of the fuselage was cracked just above the tail skid and a radio antenna had become snarled.

In the "flying laboratory" Hughes and his crew crossed the Atlantic in such comfort that they arrived fresh enough for an almost immediate take-off on the 1,641-mile trip to Moscow.

"They showed bitter disappointment when the damage which forced delay was discovered. Even so, as they rested after a meal at the airport, they felt they still might beat the late Wiley Post's globe-girdling time of seven days and 19 hours.

Price Stabilization

riculture, University of Arkansas, spoke on the afternoon program, discussing "The College of Agriculture and Farm Organizations."

He said that for 50 years the College of Agriculture of the University of Arkansas has served the farm people of the state through its research program, in developing efficient production methods. The farmers of Arkansas have taken advantage of this work, and research findings have rapidly become actual farm practices.

But now, with our progress in production methods, he said, we find another problem, and one with which the individual farmer is helpless to deal. The farmer's economic position has not kept pace with his efficiency in production. His difficulties have mounted, regardless of his own efforts or lack of them. It seems apparent that farm organizations are the solution, that farmers must avail themselves of the mass attack that has been adopted by other groups.

Pleads For Organization

"We have had 150 years of democracy in this country. But democracy has not chosen to do voluntarily for the farmer what it is now evident that he must do for himself. He cannot do it individually, but must act in a group. For that reason, the College of Agriculture is as interested in the progress of farm organizations as it is in the progress of production methods, because it believes that to be the solution."

"The index of farm prices shows that the farmer is now receiving only 74 cents on the dollar for the goods he produces in terms of the goods he must buy. In other words, the farmer is paying 26 per cent interest on his money. No business can survive on that basis, and certainly no satisfactory standard of living can be achieved by the masses of our farm people under such conditions. The problem of economic equality for agriculture now supersedes the problems of efficient production. It is a national problem, and it must be handled by national co-operative effort."

The morning session included songs by the Columbia county quartette, as well as other interesting entertainment features. R. E. Short, president of the Arkansas Farm Bureau Federation, discussed the program of the farm bureau in the state, and H. S. Mobley, president of the Washington County Farm Bureau, discussed a typical County Farm Bureau program. Mr. Short also addressed a joint Rotary-Kiwanis luncheon meeting at noon. A number of national, state and county farm bureau officials attended this luncheon.

He Just Wanted to "Shine President's Shoes"

"Peace disciple" Woody Hockaday, 52-year-old resident of Wichita, Kans., who has made the papers more than once for his eccentricities, met rough treatment as shown in the photo above when he rushed at F. D. R.'s car to "shine the President's shoes" as the latter drove through Oklahoma City, Okla., on his speaking tour. Hockaday said he wanted to earn money for a fund to "restore prosperity" to farmers. Knocked down and beaten, he was arrested and booked for disorderly conduct. In 1936, Hockaday scattered feathers over Secretary of War Woodring as part of a "feathers instead of bullets" peace campaign.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By Rodney Dutcher
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON—The political situation in his home state of New York promises to leave President Roosevelt with at least a partial headache—perhaps worse.

The one bright ray of sunshine for the White House is the fact that the mix-up resulting from the death of Senator Royal S. Copeland has brought Jim Farley back to a more cordial relationship with Roosevelt and that the two men are working together to exert New Deal control over New York's Democratic party.

Although no one yet knows all the answers to the furious trading efforts now progressing in New York, Gov. Herbert Lehman is generally expected to achieve his ambition for the Democratic nomination to succeed Copeland.

Roosevelt would rather not have Lehman in the Senate, considering him hostile and somewhat conservative of late. But efforts are being made to force Lehman to support a New Deal choice for the gubernatorial nomination who would run on the Democratic ticket with Lehman and Senator Robert F. Wagner.

Congressman James M. Mead of Buffalo looks like an increasingly good bet for that nomination, although some New Dealers are still working for Solicitor General Robert H. Jackson, believing he would be a stronger candidate against District Attorney Tom Dewey, the racket buster, in case Dewey became the Republican nominee.

Complications A-Plenty

Roosevelt and Farley hold the theory that Dewey will be "drafted" and Dewey is alleged to have whispered weeks ago that he would accept the G. O. P. nomination to run against anyone but Wagner or Lehman (Wagner refuses to run for governor, but Roosevelt might conceivably be able to draft him in an emergency.)

Let Dewey would be handicapped by Mayor F. H. LaGuardia's refusal to run for senator on the elaborately emphasized ground that he had been recently re-elected and owed it to voters to stay on the job. Dewey was elected to office last November for the first time.

About Joe Martin

A Democratic governor hostile to Roosevelt would put a bad crimp in F. D. R.'s hopes of liberalizing the party and dominating its 1940 national convention.

Congressman Joseph W. Martin of Massachusetts, who has been assistant house minority leader under Bert Snell and now is likely to succeed Snell as Republican leader, is a short, stocky, energetic, hard-headed, open-faced conservative Yankee with little of the spectacular about him.

The Republican party always has been able to depend on him for shrewd, hard work, however, and he is as popular as any G. O. P. member of the house. He is "Joe" to all and lives in a bachelor apartment at one of the capital's better hotels.

He was born one of eight children of a machinist in North Attleboro, Mass., grew up to be a reporter and finally publisher of a small newspaper. He served six years in the Massachusetts legislature, rose rapidly in organization politics and has been in congress since 1925. He is chairman of the Republican congressional campaign committee and was eastern Republican presidential campaign manager in 1936, when he was re-elected by 20,000 even though Roosevelt carried his district.

"The WPA workers all voted for me, but I couldn't get 'em to vote against Roosevelt," he explained.

Although he was confident of a Landon victory that year, his highest prediction on Republican House gains in November is 75 seats. Joe has voted nearly always against New Deal legislation and is not popular with labor outside his own district, although he came around for the final house version of the wage-hour bill when it eliminated North-South differentials.

Texas Governor

pointment would be followed by the naming of other younger men to judicial posts. The other interpretation was that the president was starting a precedent by appointing a man from outside a court district as a federal judge.

Allred was named judge for the Southern Texas district, but he does not live there. The selection surprised some Texas politicians, because Allred had not been recommended by either Tom Connally or Morris Sheppard, the Texas senators.

Allred, now 39, was 35 when he was first elected governor. Accepting the nomination, he thanked Mr. Roosevelt "from the bottom of my heart."

At Wichita Falls the president was introduced by Allred. Mr. Roosevelt's rear platform talks were made under a hissing sun, but he appeared fresh and cheerful.

Honoring International Eucharistic Congress
FROM nearly every part of Christendom come devout Catholics for the International Eucharistic Congress in which biennially Catholicism proclaims and renews its faith.
The last Congress was held in Budapest, Hungary, during the last week in May. Upwards of 100,000 pilgrims knelt in prayer in the great Heroes Square in the heart of Budapest, a vast sea of faces turned in supplication toward God and in adoration of the Blessed Sacrament. A throng of 500 priests distributed communion. Such is the spectacle of this Catholic event. Nothing in the whole ritual of the ancient church imparts such inspiration, such significance as this colorful assemblage, framed around a massive central altar and illuminated by thousands of candle-bearing worshippers.
In honor of this year's Congress, Hungary issued a special miniature sheet containing seven commemorative stamps. The better-known persons which this postal issue portrays are St. Stephen, Stephen's son, Prince St. Emerich, King St. Ladislaus, Queen St. Elizabeth, Bishop St. Maurice, and the Blessed Margaret. The Holy Sacrament is also illustrated. It is shown on the stamp above.

Big Crowd Expected to Witness All-Star Game Tuesday Night

Contest to Begin Promptly at 7:30

Winner to Play Malvern American Legion Team in Second Game

The season's largest softball crowd is expected to be attracted to Fair Park this Tuesday night where an all-star team from the City league opposes an all-star Commercial league team, beginning promptly at 7:30 o'clock.

The winner of this game will play the first American Legion team of Malvern in a second contest.

Only two games are scheduled for Tuesday, assuring fans the field will be cleared and the all-star game underway on schedule time. Players are urged to report on the field not later than 7 o'clock.

Admission prices will be 10 and 20 cents, the entire receipts to go to reduce indebtedness on lighting equipment.

Umpires will be Ralph Cornelius to call balls and strikes. He will be assisted on the bases probably by A. D. Russell or Earl Erion.

Tickets will go on sale at 6:30 o'clock. Finance Chairman Kelly Bryant announced there would be no "free list." All persons entering the park will be charged except players and umpires.

Alton in 1st Place

Softball Supervisor Earl Erion Tuesday credited the Alton CCC Camp team with a forfeited victory over the Washington team which has quit the league. Mr. Erion said that he had checked records and scorebooks and that the Alton camp had never been given credit for its played game with Washington.

The standings now place the Alton camp in undisputed position of first place in the Commercial league with 12 victories and three defeats and assures the camp of a tie for first place—even if the Williams Lumber company team wins its last remaining game with the Unique Cafe team.

Moore-Hawthorne Wins

The Williams team was defeated Monday night when Jack Witt hurled the Moore-Hawthorne team to a 7 to 5 victory over the Williams team. This left the Williams crew with 11 victories and three defeats.

If Williams defeats Unique Cafe Wednesday afternoon, the team will be tied with the Alton camp with 12 victories and three defeats. If Williams loses to Unique Cafe, the Alton camp would be first-place winners.

Until the Williams-Unique game is settled Wednesday afternoon it is uncertain just what team will play the National Guards in the play-off series starting Thursday night.

Softball Supervisor Erion said that if Williams defeats Unique Cafe—then the Williams and Alton Camp would tangle in the first game Thursday night, the winner to take on the National Guards in a single game, the first of three games to determine the champion team of the first half.

The play-off series will be renewed Friday night at 7:30—with possibly a double-header—if necessary to settle the issue.

Managers To Meet

All sponsors of teams and any other person wishing to enter a team in the second-half schedule will meet at 8 o'clock Wednesday night at the office of Earl Erion to reorganize and arrange a schedule.

Ending of the first-half schedule automatically sets all softball players free agents, giving them an opportunity to sign with whom they desire in the second half, according to Mr. Erion.

In signing up players for the second half, each manager will be required to have each player sign his own name to contracts—to avoid possible disputes later in the season.

Fight Card Ready for Friday Night

Roy Taylor and Lloyd Howell to Meet in 3-Round Bout

Friday night's main event at the Byers arena will feature an amateur bout postponed from last week's card. Roy Taylor, local high school athlete, meets Lloyd Howell, light heavyweight fighter of the CCC Camp, for three rounds. This fight was scheduled for last week's program but was postponed due to the illness of Howell's father. These boys are evenly matched both weighing about 170 pounds.

Fans are being made to rentach Harold (Red) Simpson, of Hope, and Fred Bohanan, another CCC recruit, on this week's program.

Simpson and Bohanan stood toe-to-toe last Friday night and slugged it out to a hard fought draw. The bout was pleasing to the fans and an effort will be made to feature them on Friday night's semi-final.

Pinkie Carrigan, local negro middleweight has been signed to meet John L. Jones in the four round feature preliminary. Carrigan is the only fighter to score a knock-out at the new arena.

The balance of the card will be announced Thursday afternoon.

Deadline for Turning in Entry Blanks Now Is July 20

It was announced Tuesday that because of conflicting dates that the Hope Tennis Tournament will be set back two days.

Several players have said they could enter the tournament if the dates could be changed, and when it was found that the meet was to be held on the same day as the peach festival at Nashville the new dates of July 21, 22, and 23 were announced.

The Story of OD and AD and the 2 STORES

OD and AD wanted to go into business for themselves. They decided to open retail stores. But they had different ideas as to how they should get customers. This is the story of what happened.

How OD and AD Opened their Stores

OD believed that the way to get customers was to sell at low prices, and that the way to sell at low prices was to keep his expenses down. So he spent as little as possible in fixing up his store. He said he was not going to "waste" money on "trick lighting" and a "fancy front." He bought large quantities of a few lines of merchandise, because that way he got them cheaper.

Then he put an assortment of his goods into the windows, but because he had done so little to make his store attractive, few people noticed that it was a new store, and few came in to buy.

AD decided that the first thing he must do was to make his store attractive to customers. So he had it painted throughout in cheerful colors. He completely changed the windows and front, and he put in fixtures that flooded the whole store with light.

He chose merchandise well-known by name to the public, and bought smaller quantities of many lines, thus giving customers a greater selection. He arranged his stock in the store to make shopping convenient. He put in window displays of his most interesting merchandise—and changed them frequently.

Because his windows and his store were so attractive, many people stopped to look, and enough people came in to buy so that AD's goods sold quickly and he was soon ordering more of many items.

How OD and AD went after Customers

OD so on found that he could not get the customers he needed from those who passed by his store. So he had circulars printed and hired boys to distribute them from house to house. Sometimes they put them under the door or into the mail box but often they threw them on the porch or into the yard, and many were blown away. Also, OD found it was a slow and costly way to tell his story, as in a whole day a boy could cover only a few hundred homes.

OD was disappointed to find that after all this work and expense, only a few more people came to his store.

AD decided that the more people he could tell about his merchandise, the more people would come to his store. So he put advertisements into newspapers read by many thousands of people every day. He knew that people were eager to get their newspapers to read the news. Therefore, his advertising was more likely to be seen in a paper people wanted to read. Also, the newspapers were delivered all over the city as soon as they were printed.

AD found that the more he advertised, the more people came to his store and the more goods he sold and the less it cost him to handle each sale. So he passed on the greater part of these savings in lower prices and better values to all his customers.

How OD Failed and AD Succeeded

OD found that so few people came to his store that his goods moved very slowly. He could buy very little new stock because his money was tied up.

So he decided to have a clearance sale. He had big signs painted for the front of his store. He had circulars printed and sent boys out to put them into parked cars and distribute them at homes. But the people who came saw so little they wanted that his sale was a failure. At last, he disposed of all his remaining stock to an out-of-town bargain store at less than half what he had paid for it.

OD had had a very unhappy experience, but because he had never advertised in the newspapers, few people in all the city ever knew that his store had opened or that it had closed.

AD found that with more and more people now coming to his store, his stocks moved very quickly. As a result, he was constantly able to have fresh, new merchandise for his customers.

He concluded that since people bought newspapers to read the news, he should tell them the news about his merchandise and his store. As a result, AD's advertisements were read as eagerly as any other part of the newspaper. Soon every one in town knew that AD had the newest things.

AD did not make exaggerated statements in his advertising. He just made the truth interesting. Repeatedly AD had to enlarge his store, and employ more people to take care of his increasing business. And, although his expenses were now very much greater, he sold so much merchandise and turned his stocks so rapidly that his store was very successful and was known far and wide for the values it gave its customers.

AD Tells OD How Advertising Serves the Store and Its Customers

ONE DAY OD came to AD and applied for a position. He asked AD how he had built such a fine business and obtained so many customers.

AD said, "First, by making the store an attractive and convenient place to shop."

"Second, by having the kind of merchandise our customers want."

"But these are not sufficient without Advertising to tell the people about them. So we continuously publish interesting, informative, truthful news about our service and our merchandise. And we tell it in the way that reaches the largest possible number of people quickly—through newspaper advertising."

New Chesterfield Schedule Released

New July Series of Tobacco Ads Are Lively and Colorful

The new July national release of Chesterfield advertising by Liggett & Myers Tobacco Company again features the pleasure of Chesterfield cigarettes in combination with summer sports and diversions. Emphasis is placed on action and lively spirit both in illustration and text for newspapers, magazines, billboards and point-of-sale displays.

A new theme line, "Double your smoking pleasure with Chesterfields," makes its appearance in this series. Credit for this combination of smoking qualities is given to Chesterfield's mild, ripe tobaccos, home-grown and aromatic Turkish, and pure cigarette paper—the best ingredients a cigarette can have.

Billboards and store displays of the new series are lively and colorful, in the continued good taste which has won equal approval from retailers and the public.

Great Britain Is Hit by Depression

Steady Fall of Exports, Uncertainty Due to Fear of War

By MILTON BRONNER

NEA Service Staff Correspondent LONDON.—British newspapers do not harp upon it, certainly do not make it a subject for their drawings, opposition politicians do not indulge in tirades against the government because of it, but the fact is that Great Britain is in the midst of a considerable business depression.

The steady trend downwards in the British business world has gone on despite the huge rearmament program whereby it is proposed to spend more than eight billion dollars within five years. The business indices are bad because:

1. There is uncertainty due to the fear of possible war.

2. There is a steady fall in exports.

3. The lack of real improvement in American business has a direct repercussion here.

There is a marked falling off in plans for new factory and business buildings and, while wages have tended to go up, retail prices have soared even more rapidly. This has forced consumers either to curtail purchases or to buy lower grade goods. This is proved by the fact that, while the sales of chain stores and co-operative societies have increased, the sales in department stores have gradually shrunk since January, both in value and in volume.

The steel and iron trade had been expected to show an increase because of the rearmament program. The contrary is the fact. The British Iron and Steel Federation stated that in April there were 111 blast furnaces in operation compared with 118 in the previous month. The April production of pig iron was 661,000 tons as against 714,000 in the previous month.

The estimated cost of building plans passed by 143 municipal authorities in April was 24.1 per cent lower than in April, 1937. The value of plans passed for the first quarter of 1938 was 16 per cent less than last year.

Despite the fact that last October British railways were allowed a 5 per cent increase in charges, the first 22 weeks of 1938 showed a decrease in all categories of traffic, compared with last year.

The cotton, wool and jute textile trades are reported still in a severe state of depression and the tramp shipping business is in the doldrums. Total imports for April, 1938, were 11.2 per cent less than last year and total exports were 13.3 per cent less than last year.

The important coal export trade continues to be hard hit, not only because of a measure of business uncertainty in coal-importing lands, but also of underbidding by nations like Poland.

Clearings in the banks clearly reflected the decline in business. The clearings of the London banks for May, 1938, were 5.4 per cent lower than last year. But the 11 provincial clearing districts, which even more closely reflect the trend of things in the nation, showed a decline in April, 1938, of 16.9 per cent from the figure for April, 1937.

Usually in May unemployment falls. This year it increased. The total number of jobless persons in May was about 1,780,000. This was an increase of 31,000 over April and of 382,000 over May, 1937.

Another Horn for the Band SACRAMENTO.—(AP)—Articles of incorporation have been filed with the secretary of state for Los Angeles Boosters, which, its directors announced, would work for the advantage of Los Angeles and the welfare of its people.
